What is the Syria electricity emergency project (seep)?

The Syria Electricity Emergency Project (SEEP) will rehabilitate damaged transmission lines and transformer substations and provide technical assistance to support the development of the electricity sector and build the capacity of its institutions.

What is the electricity crisis in Syria?

Syria's Electricity Crisis Most of Syria's electricity is produced by fossil fuels, including 57.3% from oil and 38.4% from natural gas in 2022. A lack of unity and the dismal conditions of the country's electrical grid and refineries have caused a major supply chain crisis and nationwide electricity shortages.

How does Syria get its electricity?

Most of Syria's electricity is generated by thermal power plants using oil and natural gas. The Tishrin hydroelectric plant near Aleppo supplies about 4 per cent of the country's power in normal circumstances. Due to frequent power cuts, most Syrians rely on generators, raising demand for diesel - a fuel in short supply.

How much damage has the Syrian electricity sector suffered over the war?

In a recent interview, Syrian Minister of Electricity Ghassan al-Zamel detailed the extensive damage that the electricity sector has endured over the thirteen-year war, estimating direct losses at $40 billion and indirect losses exceeding $80 billion.

What is Syria's Energy Plan?

The plan will look at Syria's projected energy demand and determine how much of it can come from renewable sources.

Does Turkey supply electricity to Syria?

Turkey supplies electricity to several areas in northern Syria, particularly those close to the border. This includes cities like Aleppo, which was once Syria's largest and is a major industrial hub. However, the power supply from those lines has not been consistent in recent years, Mr Jain told The National.
